The world was robbed of the 21st-century Twin Towers most of us always wanted.

Click above for more comments that rebuke the cynicism that tried to replace the Twin Towers and failed.

Not to rebuild would give the terrorists a victory. I say: build the Twin Towers taller and stronger. We Americans create; the Islamo-Fascists destroy. Long live America—the home of the free and the home of the brave.

The new building should be more magnificent and breathtaking than the previous twin towers. It is un-american to accept anything less!

I think this will send a very strong message to the world that Americans, even when dealt a blow that is devastating, pick themselves up, dust themselves off, and rebuild their strength and character back.. nothing and no one will defeat the faith, glory, honor, courage and strength of the United States of America.

Rebuilding the towers and adding an additional floor is the ONLY correct reply to the attack by islamo-fascists. Anything else is capitulation.

Monte Seabaugh All Other Americans 7/28/2006

Let's do it right for those whose lives were lost. Nothing less than the same thing or bigger!

Gabriele Lavermicocca All Other Americans 7/28/2006

We, the undersigned, share the belief that nothing could be more inspiring to our people, or disheartening to our enemies, than Twin Towers, at least as tall as before in every respect, soaring above Ground Zero.

We believe that the devastation of September 11, 2001 clouded the picture long after the rubble was cleared away and that a thorough public examination

Rebuilding the twin towers would boost American morale and pride in our country's ability to rise above challenges. It would also be a slap in the face of the jihadists.

The Twin Towers stood as colossal symbols of New York and America: ambitious, fearless, unapologetic. Everyone, even our enemies, knew what the towers meant. That's why they're gone.

Will we replace these glorious icons with something smaller and worse? The lofty rhetoric surrounding the new plan far outstrips its mediocrity: the rhetoric is to pacify those who love the US, while the pathetic design is to demonstrate our newfound humility.

Rebuild the Twin Towers, not the Dhimmi Tower.

Alan Peters All Other Americans 7/25/2006

America should never forget what happened September 11th 2001. America should resolve to rebuild the World Trade Center 1 and 2. Only then will our enemies know their defeat. Anything less is allowing terrorists at least some victory knowing that they were able to change one of America's great landmarks forever.

To rebuild; it would restore the NYC skyline.

Gabriel Martinez All Other Americans 7/24/2006

i wanted to see the towers ever since i was a child. i got my chance to see new york for the first time in june 2006. unfortunately it was too late as the iconic buildings were already destroyed!!! its time to rebuild the skyline to its iconic state!!!the freedom tower is nice but its not the twin towers the america grew to love!!

John Cowan All Other Americans 7/23/2006

We must rebuild bigger and better to show the world

Rebuilding would be the stongest message we could send to the world. Keep on rollin'.

 R. Anthony Steele Architects and Builders 7/27/2006

This was my first thought after the towers fell. We need to rebuild them, taller and stronger than they were before. Nothing will show our resolve more clearly, than to reconstruct what was taken from us on that day, as best we can.

No other construction or memorial on the 'ground zero' site will ever equal the statement that restoring the twin towers will make.

 Karen Luter All Other Americans 7/27/2006

I think that the whole world is watching to see what we replace the twin towers with. Ideally, we would replace the towers with a bigger, taller, better structure than we had before. It would be filled with scores of successful, creative, diverse, hard-working Americans who fearlessly go to work there every day. That would be a huge "in your face" to the terrorists who underestimate the American resolve and spirit.

 Mark Raney * All Other Americans 7/27/2006

 Mike Hixon All Other Americans 7/27/2006

If we don't rebuild, we allow Al Qaida to derive strength from their victory. We must show those criminals that the American spirit will never be broken, just as Israel must do the same. The only true memorial to those lost on 9-11 is to their deaths weren't in vain.

Rebuild it as it was, only BETTER, meaning — should it suffer anyother terrorist insult, load is transferred to surviving structural members. AND a fire inspector friend who reviewed building construction documents says — shortcuts applying fire protecting materials to support beams was compromised by the impact. No shortcuts with that when rebuilding THE TWIN TOWERS. Thank you. John Sipos, Tampa Bay Florida (former NYC, and NY State resident) that we will always come back better than before. We need to build to honor those who lives were taken. We need to build to fill the void in the skyline and in every American's heart. We are builders – great builders. Great builders started this country and great builders have kept it growing greater over the years. We are obligated to all those Americans before us and all Americans to come to build and rebuild when necessary.

There is no tribute in just adding the word "Freedom" to whatever you plan to replace the Twin Towers with – a true tribute is to rebuild (as long as the design flaws are dealt with).

 Jeffrey Miler All Other Americans 7/23/2006

The Twin Towers should be re-built ONE story taller, but otherwise identical in outward appearance to the original.

Leave a courtyard memorial notched out on the ground floor, with a small portion of the original "Ground Zero" material on display.

Our nations needs a demonstration of our resolve that we were not and will not be deterred from our mission as the symbol of hope and achievement on this planet.

 Peter Berger Metro New Yorkers 7/23/2006

 David Conway All Other Americans 7/23/2006

Build WTC back just as it was before the attacks. A phoenix should rise, not a memorial. Memorials can be nearby, but the hole that remains in Manhattan's skyline is a national tragedy. The "hole" is a living symbol that we Americans are divided and choose self pity, guilt, and fear over national mission, strength, and resolve.

Memorials can be constructed when the war is won. WTC should be rebuilt now! No memorials should be erected if we cut and run. A nation that won't defend itself does not remember anything. All lost will die in vain. Those espousing "cut and run" or "redeploy" have already forgotten 9/11, therefore, there is no need for a memorial until victory is securely in hand.

 TIM BEWLEY * All Other Americans 7/23/2006

I AM VERY MUCH IN FAVOR OF REBUILDING TWIN TOWERS AS TALL OR EVEN TALLER

 Arsalan Hamidi All Other Americans 7/22/2006

I'm afraid of heights but my daughter got me on the outside observation deck the year before the tragedy. I would like her to be able to take her daughter there and tell the story of how the towers that fell were rebuilt by tenacious, brave Americans.
